P. Jeyaprakash Narayanan

The system of medicine which had been in practice from time immemorial in Tamil Nadu as part of Dravidian Culture and civilization is known as Siddha Medicine. Siddhas the spiritual Scientists explored the nature and evolved Siddha Science for the findings of their experiments.

They educated their disciples who preserved and propagated Siddha concept. Traditionally the Physicians were preparing themselves the medicine required for their patients. At times they modified the formula according to the availability of the raw drugs. But when the problem of large scale production arises the need for quality control also becomes imperative.
